Deadly dispute

THE Dead 60s face a megabucks legal battle over their recordings. The Scouse band – well liked on this columnare being sued to the tune of 2150,000 by Red Alert Music productions, who claim the group has infringed copyright. They're seeking an injunction baming the group from infringing copyright in its sound recordings without permission, plus an order forcing them to hand over all infringing copies of unauthorised recordings . . . among other things.

Prices take a tumble

FIERCE supermarket price wars have seen Britain's weekly shopping bills cut by £1 billion in the past two years.

Competition between Tesco. Asda, Sainsbury's and Morrison has led to massive deflation in groceries.

Households now pay £69 less for the same basket of goods over a year than they did in 2003.

Tesco now claims almost 23% of the grocery market and retail analyst Verdict says: "This is a phenomenal achievement for one retailer."

STAR NEWS

BRITISH artists stole the show at the American Music Awards with crowd-pleasing live performances – but it was sexy US babes who hit all the right notes with their skimpy outfits.

Curvy Pamela Anderson, 38, looked a real rock chick in bum-skimming hotpants, plunging top and heavy biling jewellery.

And fellow former Baywatch star Carmen Electra, 33, showed off her own prize gongs in a cleavage-revealing dress.

Diva Mariah Carey, 35, had the audience gasping as she opened the show in a low-cut silver number slashed to the waist singing new track Don't Forget About Us.

Then the babe slipped into an even raunchier dress to collect her Favourite Female Soul/RnB Artist Award – sparkly black with a massive neck-to-navel cut out.

Other beauties at the LA bash included Lindsay Lohan, 19, Kelly Rowland, 24, who picked up two awards for Destiny's Child, and gorgeous Gwen Stefani, 36, who sang with Pharrell Williams, 33, and won the Top Female Pop Artist gong. But it was the Brits that really wowed the crowds.

The Rolling Stones beamed a live two-track performance via satellite from the latest leg of their world tour in Salt Lake City, Utah.

And 50-year-old Annie Lennox's Eurythmics had everyone on their feet as they belted out a medley of their greatest hits.

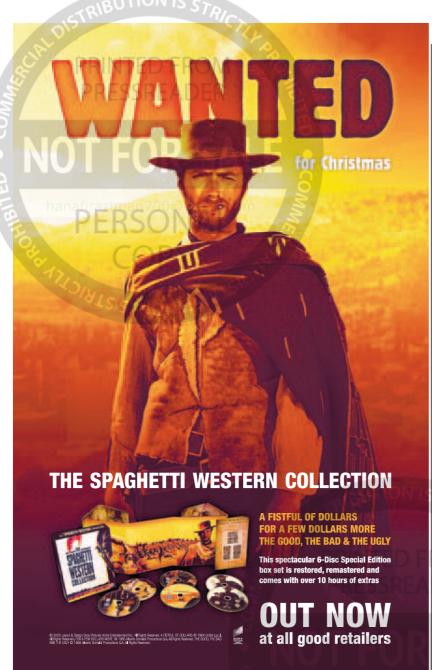

Men In Black heartthrob Will Smith, 37, scooped Favourite Male Pop Artist while Brit band Coldplay bagged Favourite Artists in the Contemporary Adult

WITH the exception of Hollyoaks all of these will be putting in a Christmas Day appearance, but the action continues throughout the festive fortnight.

EASTENDERS

EASTENDERS
A SHATTERED Alfie, mourning the loss of his dear Nana Loon, decides his future lies beyond Walford – but desperately wants to mend things with Kat.
Also it looks like the end for Sonia and Martin
"Lanky Moron" Fowler. And as New Year approaches, a key Walford character ends up brown bread.

CORONATION STREET
THE Corrie gang are treating us to their festive Coronation Street Panto, but this doesn't allow them any escape from their traditional seasonal misery. Far from it, as the worsening state of Alzheimer's victim Mike Baldwin leads him to make an alarming blunder on Christmas Day.

Danny and Leanne then conspire to turn Mike's condition to their advantage.

EMMERDALE
THEY'RE still getting away with it on Christmas Day itself, but come December 28, Sadie and Matthew's sortid affair is finally exposed, forcing Matthew to choose where his loyalties lie.

HOLLYOAKS
IT's two days before Christmas (December 23) and teacher Becca and pupil Justin can no longer keep their grubby paws off each other.

DRAMA

BEYOND Soapland, of course, the big one everyone's talking about for Christmas Day is BBC1's Dr Who: The Christmas Invasion.
David Tennant makes his full debut as the Doc tackling the threat of the evil Sycorax.

Jealous of her fellas

I'VE grown obsessed with my girlfriend's past. I can't stand the fact that she had several lovers before me and went out with one bloke for four years.

She's admitted that they were in love and every time I imagine them together I feel physically sick and depressed.

They went on loads of holidays as a couple and eventually split when he cheated on her.

However, she continued to see him "as a friend" and they slept together for a year.

Once he travelled 60 miles to our home town to see her and she ended up going back with him for a while.

After that there was another bloke who she also got close to.

Now she's with me and claims to be in love. She says I'm the best thing that's ever happened to doubt her.

But her former life continues to rankle.

I'm always quizzing her about her past and upsetting her. I've even thought about cheating on her just to teach her a

MY girlfriend is married to a rich man she can't stand.

She says he is incapable of love

She says he is incapable of love and is totally self-centred.

She's left him for me several times, but always goes back when he threatens to sell their house, move abroad and leave her with nothing.

We were together for three glorious weeks over the summer. We went on holiday, enjoyed days at the beach and made love like a couple of newly weds.

But one day I got home from work to find she had gone.

She'd left a note saying she loved me but had to go back to him. He had cancelled her credit cards and was making life so difficult for her financially she felt she had no choice.

I wept until I ached, but three days later she tayted me asking if we could had no choice.

I wept until I ached, but three days later she texted me asking if we could meet for lunch.

Like an idiot I went along and now we're secretly seeing each other again two or three times a week.

My problem is that I don't know where I stand or what the future holds for me.

I love this woman with all my heart and sexually we're dynamite. But will she ever be mine? At the moment she's talking about leaving him again just before Christmas and coming to Australia with me she's talking about leaving him again just before Christmas and coming to Australia with me.

Naturally she expects me to pay for her ticket and accommodation but won't give me any firm assurances about our relationship.

She says that this time she "thinks" it will be forever – but it all depends on how her husband reacts.

The bottom line is that she loves money and isn't prepared to be penniless for me.

Unless her husband gives her a whacking great pay-off, I can't see that she'll ever want us to be together permanently – and I don't know if that's good enough for me.

JANE SAYS: You've said it yourself—your girlfriend loves money more than anything else.
She's prepared to sacrifice a happy and loving relationship with you for a fistful of credit cards.
She'll endure an on/off marriage to an appalling man simply so that she can continue to buy stuff.
She's motivated purely by greed and that doesn't make her a very ince person in my book.

doesn't make her a very nice person in my book. She uses you to get all the love and adoration she craves, but won't give up anything in return. Surely there's more to life than baubles and beads? In you she has a ready-made partner for life, someone who is willing to make sacrifices and make the very best of a difficult situation. But that's not enough for

But that's not enough for her. My feeling is she's using you. You're too good for her and must stand up for yourself.

Should I tell on

I DISCOVERED that my best friend's husband is out of work – and she doesn't know a thing about it.

Every morning he gets up and sets off for "the office". But the truth is that he walks half a mile up the road and pops straight into his lover's house where he spends the day.

She's also married and someone who knows her well tells me that she openly boasts about the days she spends in bed with her "sex god". My friend would choke on her cornflakes at the idea of her husband being described as a sex god.

She recently told me that they hadn't made love in six months because he's not able to maintain an erection.

I don't know what this guy is doing for money, but he's certainly not earning any and I don't know if I should say something.

JANE SAYS: I think that I'd be inclined to keep well out of this one. Surely it can only be a matter of time before your friend discovers that her husband isn't earning any cash?

He can only survive on credit cards for so long before the bills start pouring in.
Or she will hear, courtesy of his loudmouthed lover, that he isn't going to work at all.
By all means be there for her when she needs a shoulder to cry on. But don't be tempted to play the role of messenger – or you might get shot.

you continue like this, then you will succeed in driving your girl-friend away. She'll get so sick of your petty jealousy that you'll push her back into the arms of her ex or any guy she fancies. I know thinking about your partner with another person is hard, but we have to get over it. Most people these days have a bit of a past with embarrassing baggage thrown in. It's just the way it is. cheat?

HER STROP AT BABE PICC

I'VE finally met the girl of my dreams and am con-vinced that she's the one.

I had four serious relationships before meeting her and have fond memories of all of them.

In fact, I've put photographs of my four ex-girlfriends in a large frame in my study.

my study.

When my girlfriend first saw it she commented on how pretty they all were – one in particular worked as a model.

a model.
But now she's gone very peculiar indeed. She's told me to get rid of all of my old photos because I'm with her now. Apart from the fact that I'd feel like I was losing an important part of my past, I have never seen this insecure or jealous side of her before.

JANE SAYS: I think that keeping these photographs of your four ex-girlfriends on show is insensitive.

I know I wouldn't like it one bit.

one bit.

By all means keep them in an album or drawer, but have some consideration for your current partner by packing them away.

How would you like it if she had pictures of her exlovers on display?

The The gazer who knows your future

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

You may have to find new ways to express yourself this year. How you do it is not that important, but meaning what you say is.

Aries

(Mar 21-Apr 20)

WORK could take you further afield. What's more, you are about to enter a particularly thrilling phase in your life if you're travelling. Metaphorically speaking, you appear to be standing in the doorway, but you will soon be pointed in a new direction – even if you end up at a place you know very well. To find out news about a conquest, call...

Gemini

(May 22-June 22)

THE Sun is close to Mercury today. So somebody is bound to want to talk about a relationship. And the mere mention of another liaison could ruin it. By comparison, you could find yourself beginning to get involved. But whatever you are cajoled into doing, you assume it's for the best. To see why life won't be dull, call...

DON'T freeze your socks off this winter – just check out the amazing new range from Pretty Polly.
You're sure to find just the thing to keep your pins looking perfect while staying wonderfully warm.
The hosiery company has branched out with a funky new collection of knee highs, stockings and tights, which offer a sexy way to beat the winter chill.

Called Leg Looks, Pretty Polly's range of bright colours, fishnets, textured patterns and funky designs are a real antitote to the cold, grey days ahead.
But don't fear if you're a fan of the label's more traditional products – there's still the usual classic opaques in this year's must-have seasonal shades, midnight, chocolate and bottle green.

It's a move into red hot fashion for the firm which has already won an army of fans with its sensational ranges.

This time it has gone for a designer feel, taking its lead from the international cat-

And the results are totally affordable chic enough to make a real style statement.

The more outlandish designs are the perfect leg candy for party girls who want to make an impression. Or if you're a little more cautious, try contrasting a classic black dress with one of the more sexy, flirty options.

Either way, you'll be sure to turn heads. So why not snap up some Pretty Polly bargains and transform yourself into a leggy lovely?

HOT STUFF: Doc Martin, ITV1, 9pm

TO WATCH

DOC MARTIN has a shock tonight (ITV1, 9pm) when he goes to treat a salmonella outbreak at the home of local outbreak at the home of local nutjobs the Flint family. Besides the fact that these weirdos have an unhealthy fixation with stuffing dead animals, there's something not quite right about their mum Doreen. On further investigation, the doc learns the villagers haven't set eyes on this woman in years – so who the hell's the grey-haired old biddy sait in the rocking chair up at the Flint's place?

Flint's place?
Elsewhere in Portwenn, Al is gutted to hear his mum once had an affair – and immediately fears the worst. His father Bert assures him: "It meant nothing." But Al's not prepared to drop the subject – and comes out with the question Bert has been dreading for 25 years: "Are you my dad?" Bert's immediate response? "If you'll excuse me," he replies, "I've got a washing machine to plumb in ..."

ELSEWHERE, BBC1 kicks off a quirky new docu-soap called BIG RED BUS (7pm), meeting some of the people who keep London's bus service called BIG RED BUS (7pm), meeting some of the people who keep London's bus service moving. Throughout the eight-week series we'll meet characters such as depot worker Dennis, who transforms himself at weekends into an Apache Indian called Wolf, plus single mum Terry, who at one point has to discourage a bunch of school kids from torching the top deck. Mostly it's a light-hearted series, but episode three will include footage of the crew's reactions as news filters through of the July 7 terrorist attacks.

FINALLY tonight, a double dose of comedy sees gay Dafydd getting himself a girlfriend in LLTTLE BRITAIN (BBC1, 9pm) and Howard accidentally sending a smutty text to his deeply unamused PA in THE WORST WEEK OF MY LIFE (BBC1, 9.30pm).

CONGRATULATIONS are due to the makers of CORONATION STREET (ITV1) for defying the laws of soap opera. It's often said – by me anyway – that the more episodes of a soap you put out, the less believable it becomes. The Weatherfield posse put that to the test this week, with a whopping three episodes on Monday night, and a double bill yesterday. But somehow, they pulled it off – perhaps because the stories they're juggling at present are so gripping.

at present are so gripping.

We've got Sunita looking more pregnant by the minute with Dev's twins, but still refusing to forgive him for his secret life. Then there's scheming Sarah Platt, who will stop at nothing to capture the heart of Jason Grimshaw, a bloke so dopey that an earthworm could beat him in an IQ test. You had to sympathise with Jason, when his girlfriend finally discovered he'd betrayed her. "Was she good in bed?" she demanded. This was Jason's chance to grovel at her feet for forgiveness, and to reassure the barmald that she was the true love of his life. "Well, it was different, wannit?" he said.

Feud

Meanwhile, though it's not obvious where it's all heading yet, the ongoing feud between Tracy and Claire was wound up a notch. Claire told Deirdre that she thought little Amy had whooping cough, which made Tracy look, once again, like the Mother From Hell. As Deirdre took the kid off to casualty. Tracy got into a right state at home. Not out of concern for her small daughter, but because there was no one to make the dinner.

You'd have thought that someone as harmless as Claire would be below Tracy's radar, but it seems that's exactly why she hates her. "She buys all her clothes from a kiddles' boutique," Tracy snarled last night. "She looks like a flipping Care Bear."
Claire retaliated by saying that Tracy was the sort of woman who'd have been dunked in a pond in byeone centuries.

in a pond in bygone centuries.

But witches aren't real, while there's something about classic soap-bitches like Tracy that is – and that's what makes her so rewarding to watch.

THREE people all died at the same time – a pensioner, a middle-aged man and a young blonde.

The policeman had to explain to the coroner why all three died with big smiles on their faces.

The pensioner died of heart failure while making love to his young mistress, he said, while the middle-aged man drank himself to death celebrating winning a million on the lottery.

The coroner asked: "What of the third body?"

"Ah." says the policeman. "She was struck by lightning."

DENZYL ROBERTS, Warwick.
TWO skin cells are sat in a pub chatting when one says: "I looked in the mirror the other day and I'd turned blue with yellow spots."

The other replies: "I don't believe you, it must be a pigment of your imagination."

£10 LETTER

YOUR stories about political correctness affecting Christmas don't surprise me at all.

We received a "festive" greeting from our local councillor, who was clearly worried not to offend minorities in his ward.

We got a "Prosperous Diwali" wish and a "Eid Mubarak" wish, but no mention of Christmas for the Christian community. His seasonal message has offended me, and he won't be getting my vote again.
